CITY CELEBRATION

City Celebration, a non-profit organization devoted to the promotion of Bay Area arts and culture, became one of Fort Mason's newest residents when it moved into Building A early this year. This month, City Celebration's publication, City Arts Monthly, will be featured in an exhibition of its front cover art in the Fort Mason Foundation Lobby, Building A.

Noted for the multi-cultural focus of its programs, which include the Festival of Performing Arts in Honor of Senior Citizens, the annual San Francisco Conga Drum Festival, and the recent Ethnic Dance Festival, City Celebration began four years ago with one primary purpose in mind: to provide exposure for the many diverse cultures that exist outside the commercial arts mainstream.

"There was a need," Program Director Bruce W. Davis points out, "for a coordinated effort to promote performing artists not usually covered by the media or by commercial producers." City Celebration—which subsists on funds received through grants from foundations and corporations, as well as through memberships and advertising revenue from City Arts Monthly—fills that need.

City Celebration currently sponsors more than half a dozen projects. One of the most highly visible of these is the publication City Arts Monthly, whose visually dynamic front covers are produced by talented Bay Area artists and photographers. More than 35,000 copies of City Arts are printed each month, containing comprehensive events listings, artists profiles, news on legislation and grants of interest to the arts community—as well as interviews, feature articles and editorials.

City Celebration projects, including the publication of City Arts Monthly, exist through a successful co-operation with the business, arts, ethnic, and civic communities of San Francisco and the Bay Area. Elliot Katz, founder of City Celebration, stresses this success in the organization's adherence to its goals: "To increase cooperation between business, the media and the arts; to strengthen the artistic and cultural heritages of the Bay Area; and to make the arts accessible to all."

7/25 "You Mean Seaweed?"

SEA VEGETABLES

"You mean seaweed?" Yes. Both gathering and cooking sea vegetables are skills offered in a one-day workshop this month at Fort Mason. Conducted by Alice Green, through the Oceanic Society, the workshop will take place on Sunday, July 25, from 8 am to 3:30pm

Workshop participants will meet outside the Fort Point Administration office one-quarter mile before the fort. After an introduction to the field, the group will gather this untapped and renewable bounty at the world's most varied and abundant source, our North American Coast. Then, at the Fort Mason Hostel, reached preferably by bicycle, the group will prepare and savor a ten course, sea vegetarian meal. Dishes of Japan, Korea, the Philippines, China and Native America will symbolically join the peoples of the Pacific Rim Basin.

CLASS OFFERS SECURITY

Dr. Judith Fein's tear gas certification course, offered this month on Thursday, July 8, is for those who want to be able to effectively defend themselves while avoiding physical violence.

Tear gas immediately incapacitates the assailant, yet causes no permanent damage. This is how it works: within 2-3 seconds after the spray reaches the eyes, the eyes involuntarily close, causing temporary blindness, tearing and stinging. These effects—which last anywhere from 10 to 30 minutes—buy time for you to run away.

In order to carry and use tear gas for self-defense, you must be licensed. You are required to take a course which has been approved by the California Department of Justice. Dr. Fein's course is just such a class. At the 2½ hour workshop, you will be instructed not only in the use and effects of tear gas, but also in its legalities, decontamination, and first aid.

In addition, you will learn valuable information on the psychology of assault prevention—how not to be targeted as a victim, and what to do if you are. You will be taught some simple, effective physical defense skills as a back-up.

Dr. Fein, a nationally recognized expert in self-defense, holds a black belt in Tae Kwon Do and is the author of the best-selling book on assault prevention, "Are You a Target?"

Classes are held monthly at Fort Mason. For additional information, call: 564-9140.
